By Associated Press.
LONDON, Dec. 21.—A wordy altercation between former Premier Venizelos of Greece and Riza Nur Bey, Turkish Nationalist delegate, caused the Near East Conference commission on minorities to end this morning's session of the commission. The dispute was over the question of emigration.

M. Venizelos bitterly attacked the Ankara government and protested against the deportation of Greeks by the thousands from Anatolia. Riza Nur replied in the same vein, charging Venizelos with being responsible for the Turkish-Creek war.

The voices of the two delegates rose to a high pitch, both speaking at the same time and refusing to heed the pleadings of the president that they calm down. In view of this the president declared the session adjourned amid confusion.

Joseph Schenck, producer, said he would employ Arbuckle and the latter said he was thankful for the chance to work and would strive to make good.

Hays issued a brief statement, saying he felt every man was entitled to his chance, and that the film industry not only wanted to live and let live, but it wanted to live and help live.

Arbuckle said: "I want to say that I am very grateful to all those who are helping me and I will prove myself worthy of their faith in me."

At the Theatres

THE SOISSON.

"LORNA DOONE," which opened today at this theatre for a three day attraction, is the greatest of all Maurice Tourneur's successes. Aladon Bellamy, John Bowers and Frank Keenan portray the leading roles. Tourneur's fictionalization of Blackmore's famous novel has attracted world-wide attention and for once the critics have forgotten to complain that "the picture is nothing like the book." While the novel has been decidedly condensed in the film version, all the main dramatic episodes which have made the book a "best-seller" for three generations have been retained and the spirit of the times has been faithfully reproduced. For the fan unfamiliar with the novel, "Lorna Doone" offers an evening of exciting entertainment for the love story works out to a triumphant ending only after tremendous conflicts in which life itself is at stake. A spectacular fight in which one man matches his wits against the strength of a whole band of outlaws and the burning of the "Doone" village after a bloody battle are "thrillers" that would satisfy anyone. To the book lover, the student of English classics and the educator, the coming of "Lorna Doone" will be a rare treat. Tourneur has earned the reputation as an educator in the film industry and his screen versions of classical books and plays have been marked by such artistry that they have won permanent places in the film libraries of schools, churches and community houses.

THE PARAMOUNT.

"THE NEW TEACHER," showing today at this theatre, presents Shirley Mason, the captivating screen star, in one of the most delightful roles in her screen career. Delightful audiences yesterday witnessed the first day presentation "The New Teacher." In this splendid William Fox production, the little star surpasses her past excellent performance, and adds another laurel to her crown as one of the leading lights of the screen. Miss Mason enacts the role of a wealthy New York girl who tires of the social grind. She is bored with her mode of living and yearning to do something for the fellow beings in the poorer districts of the great city. Her opportunity comes when her mother tells her that the family fortune has been dissipated and she takes a position as a teacher in the slums. Her sweetheart discovers her plans, and in order to watch over her becomes a policeman. In the end he induces her to marry him, but not until she realizes his interest in her work. The opening scenes of the picture show Miss Mason making an aeroplane flight over New York city, landing later in a crowded East Side street. Alan Forrest, Earl Metcalfe and young Rex Moore, who support the charming little star, do exceptionally fine work. The picture furnishes an excellent entertainment. Friday and Saturday Richard Talbot will appear in "The Cub Reporter."

THE ORPHEUM.

"BEAUTY'S WORTH," the feature picture today, is a Paramount production starring Marion Davies in a delightful role. Elderly members of audiences will be taken back to the Civil War period when they see "Beauty's Worth." Not that the new Paramount picture concerns the antics of the last century, for it is a modern story in every way. In it Miss Davies, a Quaker girl, appears at a fashionable water resort in a bathing suit that none of the younger generation would recognize except as an exhibit in a museum. Miss Davies plays the part of Prudence Cole, reared in a strictly conservative atmosphere by two maiden aunts. Prudence is invited to Haven, a seaside resort for the wealthy. Being fond of swimming she dons her bathing suit and joins her "friends" at the outdoor pool. When she removes the cape which modestly hides her costume there is astonishment. The garment was designed by a seamstress who believed it horrid to disclose more of the female form than the face. Long bloomers reach down below the knees. The skirt is far longer than any of modern cut. Prudence looks like a figure from an ancient Egyptian tomb suddenly come to life. The aunts cut her and she is embarrassed. But Prudence soon learns modern ways and she triumphs over her enemies. Friday and Saturday Agnes Ayres, supported by Milton Sills and other well-known screen favorites, will be seen in "Bordenland."

THURSDAY EVENG, DEC. 21, 1932.

KEEP THE KETTLE BOILING.

There is no better means of giving practical expression to the spirit which should animate us at this season than to assist the Salvation Army in bringing Christmas cheer to those families who are in the community who might otherwise be overlooked.

To provide funds for this purpose
the army has placed the kettles on the sidewalks about the city, each in charge of a soldier who patiently and all day long thinks a little help to fract the addition of generosity for the purpose of inducing them to make deposits of money in the kettles. Thus far only $200 has been raised by this means. Last year, three times that amount was contributed and used by the army in filling Christmas dinner baskets for the poor of the city and providing toys for the children.

There is just as abundant reason,
and more, for making this Christmas as cheerful to the unfortunate as last and there are about the same number who can have their lives brightened in this way. The appeal should, therefore, have quick and generous response and it is believed it will when the public knows that the funds for this purpose are only in part provided.
While you are preparing to keep the Christmas fires blazing cheerfully in your own home, don't fail to help keep the Salvation Army Christmas kettle boiling merrily. The gift of your heart as well as your Christmas dinner be kept warm.

MAKING CHRISTMAS DAY SAFE.

In making preparations for the observance of Christmas in our homes and places of public entertainment, such as school houses, churches, and elsewhere, too great precautions cannot be taken to avoid the danger of fire, particularly in connection with Christmas trees.

Statistics compiled by the underwriters association show that last year about one in every ten Christmas fires resulted in the death of one or more persons.

It is believed that the candles placed to associate such occurrences with what is intended and ought to be the happiest day of the year. For that reason everybody who will have part in planning Christmas entertainments ought to be willing to accept a little safety advice based upon the sad experience of preceding holiday seasons.

The Christmas tree, the most generally used form of seasonal decorations, has been a very prolific source of danger. Little care being taken in setting it up securely, and sometimes placing it near heating or lighting fixtures, and trimmed with candles,
it becomes a inflammable material, and finally a positive menace to the safety of the home. If firmly erected remote from possible contact with a source of fire and lighted by electric lamps instead of dangerous candles,
one of the principal causes of Christmas fires will be eliminated.

The custom of placing lighted candles in windows on Christmas eve is a very beautiful one but it is better to abandon it than to incur the danger of setting fire to curtains, draperies and decorations. In celebrations where Christmas treats are served to Sunday school children Santa Claus himself is often responsible for fire.
The long whiskers and hat he wears is very easily ignited and sometimes with fatal results.

In giving Christmas tree a snow effect it is far safer to use metal tinsel, fake asbestos and powdered mica than paper, clippings and cotton.
Smokers should keep at a safe distance from trees and the evergreen should themselves be removed immediately after Christmas day. In England there is a belief that trees left in the house after New Year's Day bring bad luck to the family. As a superstition it is better founded than most beliefs of the kind since the majority of Christmas fires have been due to dried-out trees.

When Santa is donning his pack he ought to take the precaution to select toys that do not require alcohol, gasoline or kerosene for their operation, and should not include in his supply unsubstantial motion picture machines using easily ignited films. He should be careful in his selection of electrical playthings since many of them are defective in wiring and have insecure and dangerous contacts which may cause serious burns and fires.

If for any reason, or in spite of all the precautions taken, someone's clothing goes catch fire, be prompt in telling them in a rug or woolen blanket in order to smother the flames, remembering to perform the operation in such manner that the flames will be kept away from the face so as to avoid the danger of inhaling.

If everything here indicated is done to make Christmas safe from fire the fest of the day and all its fellowship and associations can be enjoyed free of anxiety on the part of every one.
At the same time the freedom will have just the same kind of opportunity to enjoy their own turkey dinner instead of undergoing the exposure and discomfort of saving you, your family and your home from destruction by fire having its origin in a Christmas tree.

Our City Council made a mistake in not taking out a copyright on the "Murphy Act." We might have added appreciably to the city's income by royalties from Scottsdale, Dunbar and Uniontown, all of which have "used our enforcement regulations as their model."

This is the shortest day of the year but it will be long enough for you to make some of those belated purchases which will serve to make Christmas the happiest day for somebody, or several somebodies.

Remember, it will take much of the joy out of Christmas if you count on receiving gifts equal in number and value to those you bestow.

Don't forget that the small man wants to eat his turkey on Christmas just as you do.

Not too late to buy your quota of Christmas Souls.

Red Fire and Ballyhoo

Philadelphia Ledger.

Much cry is being made in Congress over what amounts to precious little wool. Stripped of its political grand-standing, the Norris-Ashurst, radical-progressive proposal to amend the Constitution by abolishing the Electoral College is largely the Dear Old Bunk.

When a voter marks his ballot now he does not vote directly for his presidential choice. He votes for a number of electors, who, in turn, if elected, vote for President. It amounts to the same thing. The number of electoral votes from any state equals the number of members that state has in Congress. The voter is voting for the candidate of his choice when he votes for these electors? It is a little cumbersome, but it is fair and representative and has worked easily and successfully since 1804.

All the new amendment proposals to take the names of the electors off the ballots. The candidate who gets the most votes in a state will, as now, receive the "electoral vote" of that state. That vote will be certified and forwarded to Congress by the secretary of state or other official, instead of the "electors" meeting as they do now certifying the vote and sending it by messenger to Washington.

The "popular vote" will have no more to do with the election results than it does now. The "electoral vote" will name President as it does today. It will be possible for a candidate to get a greater "popular vote" than his opponent and lose in the electoral count. The whole business amounts to a large and empty gesture.

"The abolition of the 'electors'"
might make it easier for a third-party candidate to get his name on the national ballots. That is about all. The average voter will know little about it and care less. Granted that the amendment is adopted, no vital interest will be served. Nothing much will happen, one way or another, that has not been happening.

So far as it has been proposed, the whole business is a piece of "ballyhoo" in front of the insurgent tent. It is the burning of red fire and the clashing of the loud cymbal on a high platform by some of our most persistent self-advertisers in and out of Congress.

Land of the Sausage

Washington Star.

Westphalia, in Prussia, is the home of the sausage—that is, the sausage in all its glory; since no other country than Germany shows so many and so bewildering a variety of this product.
In Westphalia, it is said, a trader will name no fewer than 400 different kinds of sausage. Many substances enter into their composition. There was a sausage exhibition in Germany when no less than 1,000 varieties of sausage were shown.

A famous American has observed that a good many Germans would rather invent a new sausage than anything else. In this relation there is told the story of a young Prussian who, though he had received an expensive training as a chemist, shut himself up in his laboratory and instead of devising a new dye, safety match, motor engine, explosive, airplane or photographic lens, took pork, veal, olives, pepper, fennel, old wine, cheese, apples, cinnamon and herbines and from them evolved a wonderful and totally original "wurst"
the best of its kind. He has amassed a considerable fortune from his sale.

Apt Allegation's Artful Aid.

Christian Science Monitor.
If the Ku Klux Klan is instrumental in naming K. K. Kuppel as the next Speaker of the House of Representatives of the general assembly in Oregon, as is said to be likely, he will not need to echo the great Churchville plea for apt allegation's artful aid to emphasize his opinion.

Meter Reader Is Bitten.

Ralph Huey, a meter reader for the Fayette County Gas Company, reported to the police this morning that he had been bitten by a little dog at the home of Mrs. J. F. Dillon in Victor avenue. The bite will be given the attention of a physician.

LET'S GO.

The future's looking mighty bright.
Let's go!
Things are working out all right.
Let's go!
Wheels are turning, stocks are low.
Let's go!
Traffic signals green and so
Let's go!

Hard times? They are in the past.
Let's go!
Sethbacks came but couldn't last.
Let's go!
Gloom has held its just parade.
Let's go!
Grad the basement, strike the match.
There's a fortune to be made.
Let's go!

Sides are clear that once were dark.
Let's go!
Everything on the mark.
Let's go!
We have done with frown and whim.
Let's go!
Get and give and let the sun
Everything is looking fine.
Let's go!

We're a nation, free from hate.
Let's go!
We can't keep it strong and great.
Let's go!

Let's go!
Happy land, up to the top.
Let's go!
Let us show her what we're worth.

LAWRENCE RINGER UNHURT WHEN HIS TRUCK HITS WALL

SOUTH CONNELLSVILLE, Dec. 20.—Lawrence Ringer had a narrow escape from serious injury Saturday evening when driving a big five-ton truck belonging to the Tri-State Candy Company, he swerved to one side of the road to keep from side-swiping a car coming in the opposite direction and in doing so ran into a cement wall.

Ringer was returning from Derry where he took a load of candy, and was bringing half a load back with him as all the stores there had closed and when he hit the cement wall, candy was thrown in all directions. The truck was demolished. Ringer was going at the rate of 25 to 30 miles an hour and when he hit the wall the shock sent him through the windshield. When he regained his senses he was sitting on the hood with his feet through the windshield.

New officers were elected last evening at a regular meeting night of the volunteer fire department for the coming year. They are: J. L. Edenbo, president; M. R. Orbach, vice-president; Joseph Hill, recording secretary; W. B. Helms, financial secretary; H. T. Robinson, treasurer; S. E. Miller, fire chief; W. C. Koffer, assistant chief; W. B. Helms, captain; R. W. Shaw, lieutenant; Clyde Zigler, trustee; D. W. Shaw and W. B. Helms, delegates to convention; and A. W. White and Joseph Hill, alternates.

Final plans and arrangements for an old time shooting match to be held Saturday and Monday were completed. The match will begin Saturday morning at 10 o'clock at Mrs. Field's. Turkeys and chickens will be the game.

GREATEST VOLUME OF TRAFFIC EVER OFFERED RAILROADS

Requires Strenuous Effort of Officials and Men to Meet Situation.

FACILITIES INADEQUATE

Railroads, throughout the United States are now being offered a volume of traffic for movement that exceeds anything ever recorded either before, during, or after the war, says the Pittsburgh Post. The number of cars loaded for several weeks has been very near the "peak" records set in 1920. The exceptionally heavy car loadings, accompanied by a steadily increasing car shortage, clearly indicate that a vast volume of traffic will be offered the railroads in the immediate future, and that strenuous efforts must be put forth by everyone if the problem presented by this situation is to be successfully met.

"Were the solution of this problem entirely in the hands of railroad men there would be no excuse for presenting this situation to the public. But when it is considered that the average freight car is actually in a train moving between one terminal and another only two hours and 35 minutes out of every 24 hours, and that it is actually at the service of the shipper or receiver of freight, eight hours and 45 minutes out of every 24 hours. The need for co-operation between the railroads and the shippers and receivers of freight becomes apparent.

Insofar as the railroads' part of the cooperation is concerned, the greatest progress toward the successful solution of the present traffic problem will be made through the efforts of railroad men to reduce the number of bad order locomotives and cars and to bring about a general improvement in operating efficiency.

The railroads have already recognized the imperative need to meet this problem, indicated by the fact that despite a nation-wide strike of railway shop employees the number of bad order freight cars has been reduced. The bad order locomotive situation has presented a more difficult problem, but practically every railroad in the country is now reporting rapid and continued improvement in its ability to repair motive power and in addition to this almost 1,000 new locomotives were installed or placed on order between January 1 and November 1. Likewise the railroads are reporting improvement in operating efficiency every month.

As indicative of the effect that this cooperation will have is the authoritative estimate that an average increase on only one ton in each loaded car would be equivalent to the addition of 80,000 cars to the available supply and that an increase of only one mile in the average movement of each car each day (possible only with the co-operation of shippers in loading and unloading cars promptly) would be equivalent to increasing the available supply of cars by 100,000.

Railroad men are now doing everything in their power to render the greatest transportation service possible with the existing inadequate facilities and they will continue to do so. The shippers and receivers of freight can cooperate in the manner described and the result of this co-operation will be to tide the country over a serious transportation problem.

Home-made, but Has No Equal for Coughs

Makes a family supply of really effective cough medicine. Easy to prepare, and saves about 50¢.

If you have a severe cough or chest cold accompanied with soreness, throat tickle, hoarseness, or difficult breathing, or if your child wakes up during the night with croup and you want quick help, try this reliable old home-made cough remedy. Any doctor can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. This recipe makes a pint of really remarkable cough remedy. It tastes good, and in spite of its low cost, it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a very short time. It loosens and raises the phlegm, stops throat tickle and soothes and heals the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes with such promptness, ease and certainty that it is really astonishing.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is probably the best known means of overcoming severe coughs, throat and chest colds.

There are many worthless imitations of this mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., 151 W. Wayne, Ind.

The Sporting World

Coker Basketeers Resting; Start Practice Again Next Week; Neid Will Report Then

Coker Quintet Will Not Lose Opportunity to Polish Up.

FIRST GAME JANUARY 5

Beginning next week the Connellsville High School basketball players will report each day at the High School gymnasium and work out among themselves. The boys are "shaking off" antlers during this week of vacation and next week will see the quintet working to get into shape for the opening of the W. P. I. A. basketball season on January 5 at Bradenton.

The Cokers have won three easy season games already played but the victories did not throw any light on the real strength of the team. The basketballers have lots of room for improvement but Coach Wingo will develop his squad into a whirlwind of energy before the schedule is far advanced.

Connellsville's chances for a title all the floor look good this season but it is up to the dribblers entirely. The big and hard work are the only methods by which such a height can be attained and for the most part the team is observing the rules.

The coach reports much to encourage him in the new material this season. There are a number of promising youngsters out for the squad and the reserves will present a front almost as strong as that of the regulars.

Neid, who appeared flashy in his freshman year, the only season he played with the varsity, will report all next week. He has not been anything yet because of after-school employment during the holidays. Beginning the new year, however, he will be on deck and his presence may add needed strength to the outfit.

Coach C. R. Wingo, who is spending Christmas at his home in Washington, Del., will return the latter part of next week in order to take the Coker quintet in hand.

According to information of managers of teams which will play in the city during this season, there will be some strong fights entered. All the teams have taken on new "timber" and the result will be added strength.

The Y. M. C. A. Seniors of Dickerson Run will play the St. Vincent club of Lousburg, N. J. at the Dickerson Run "Y" on Tuesday, December 22. Y-players are requested to appear at the gym Thursday and Friday to practice. The St. Vincent team is a strong outfit and a good game is looked forward to.

Dickerson Run All Stars Are Winners

WHY PITCHERS PREFER EVANS BEHIND PLATE

Hesitancy on the part of umpires to call a third strike caused many of the wrangles the past season. An umpire hates to call the third one, and unless a pitcher cuts the plate he is likely to find the umpire calling it a ball.

Pitchers rarely cut the plate. They work for the corner. The umpire gives them the corner until the batsman has two strikes, and then the umpire calls the same "corner" ball bad.

Bill Evans "gives" the pitcher the corner after he has two strikes on a batter, and for this reason pitchers would sooner see Evans behind the plate than any man in the league.

Midget Is Grid Hero

Photograph is of Halsey Mills, sensational 120-pound quarterback of the Dartmouth football team. Not long ago Mills was unthought of as a first-string player. He was too thin and fragile for the game, so everyone thought, but he kept at the game until he caught the eyes of the coaches. He has played in several games, including those against Harvard and Cornell. In the latter game distinguishing himself as a player of first-class caliber. Now all Dartmouth is singing his praises.

SOX SIGN INDIAN SOUTHPAW

Jack Williams, Full Blood Member of Huron Tribe, Agrees to Pitch for Chicago Team.

For the first time in the history of major league baseball a left-hand Indian is scheduled to make his appearance on the baseball diamond. He is Jack Williams, a full blood member of the Huron tribe, signed by the Chicago White Sox. Williams, who is nineteen years old, is a pitcher. He is five feet ten inches tall and weighs 175 pounds.

Last season he was a member of the spring staff of the Belleville, Ont., club in the Central Ontario league, where he established a record of twenty-two victories and one defeat. His only loss was a two-hit affair in which an error cost him the game. Williams' success was due to his wonderful control.

GOLF RECORDS AT LLANERCH

John Edmundson Made a 66 Just After Marcus Greer Made Remarkable Mark of 67.

It will be a long time before anyone is able to lower the course record made at the Llanerch Country club by its professional, John Edmundson. During the season Edmundson made a 66 there, just a few days after Marcus Greer, the amateur, made the almost unbelievable total of 67. Edmundson had 38 each way.

"Stuffy" McInnis of Cleveland wants to take up college coaching after he retires from the big league. Recently it was reported from New Haven that McInnis would be tendered the position as Yale coach.

No matter whether the "Big Three" go on with intersectional football or drop it, there will be other colleges to take it up and there seems to be no indication on the part of all of the "Big Three" universities to do away with it altogether.

WITHOUT CAPITAL BOY OPENS BANK IN RHINELAND

Checks Now Are Held in Preference to Currency.

UPSETS MIND OF CENTURIES

German Lad in Two Years Has Made a Name for Himself as a Banker in Ordinary Business. He Has a Successful Bond Salesman at His Elbow. Wins War Honors in Air and at Twenty-Five Heads American Plan Bank in Germany.

The greatest life story of a boy who at the age of twenty-five is reported in the youthful smiling personality of an American boy who capitalized opportunity and foresight, opened a bank in Coblenz, Germany, in 1920, without capital and is now the German banker, and his story is held in preference to currency throughout the Rhineland. He actually taught the Germans in two years to use checks in ordinary business, upsetting the strictly currency habit of centuries.

He is a banker, and chief of the Rhineland bank (Neudecker, Weinsberger & Co.), Coblenz, has declined of late to accept it with great banking institutions of Germany and is in New York organizing the Travelers Bank of Paris with fully developed plans for the operation there and through branches all over Europe. It is a fairy story at all. The Guaranty Trust company of New York, in the banking school taught him so well that he was the youngest bond salesman in New York in 1916 when he was barely sixteen years old, and he showed a record with sales that included one to a very wealthy New York capitalist of $450,000 in Anglo-French bonds.

Want to the War. Thus fairly well started in life as a financier, he decided that it was too slow a game when the war came on. He applied to the American army for the American flying corps. His name was superlatively changed to the Lafayette Escadrille when the German ambassador at Washington, early in 1917, protested against association of the word American with military service. He was accepted, not then an aviator of the United States.

Neudecker's application for a chance to fight in the air was under favorable consideration when he decided to get to France at once. He joined the American ambulance in Paris in January, 1917, drove ambulances, did first aid work, and the ambulance service was diverted to transport of supplies for the American forces. He was very busy, very busy times around the ambulance and on the lines in that work, but he wanted to get into the front line and not as an American military aviator was organized. Neudecker joined that service, August, 1917.

When the armistice was declared November 11, 1918, the American military aviation service had five graduates. Neudecker was the first. He was awarded the Croix de Guerre with palm, had three recommendations for the Distinguished Service decoration and a record of bringing down three bombers and their pilots in air combats.

As pilot, he was a first lieutenant and with his rank he was immediately attached to the Hoover mission to Poland on the staff of General Grove, chief. Lieutenant Neudecker was sent to Lithuania, and there supervised distribution of American food supplies.

This young man was educated by his father and prepared for Executive and Harvard but when he was seventeen decided on business life, banking, for his career. He entered the Guaranty Trust company's service in its school of instruction in 1905 and within 25 months was selling its bonds in Wall street.

That training made him realize the tremendous possibilities all about him in post-war Europe. The American Rhineland force whose headquarters were outside Coblenz numbered about 20,000 and the United States was distributing there about $1,000,000 good American dollars every month in payment.

There was not in Coblenz any bank which accepted dollar accounts. All the banks handled marks exclusively as the basis of their transactions. There was a desperate need for a dollar deposit bank. Found Credit Readily. Capital was not an asset of the youthful American financier but he leased a two-story building, remodeled it, interest up with a modern American office equipment and had grown up Germans coming in to just look at it before it was finished. The German banking house type then was a small office with a counter, which only recently had supplanted merely the desk of the German banker in his office in his home where he transacted all his business.

Credit for this enterprise young Neudecker found ready for his asking, on all sides. He had learned not to be afraid of doing the unusual in Germany.

A partner who could speak German was a great need for the new bank. Neudecker found Paul J. Weinsberger, a San Francisco boy, commissioned in the American artillery service, was out of the army after the armistice and also broke.

That was the boy who was the boy who proposed to be a boy, embryo banker and they joined forces, wonderful but not capitalists. But capital, you know, really is a part of the routine in preparing for a banking business. The American banks advertised for partners with capital and they got none.

The bank was opened in June, 1920, and the capital partner was twenty-three years old and did not look like age. Its site had been well chosen, on the main route to Coblenz from everywhere. Everybody bound from the American camp for the other banks, the Salvation Army headquarters, the theaters had to pass the American bank.

Before it had a dollar of deposits it had all fittings and supplies which would be a credit to any bank in America, including bank check books which cost about 20 cents each. It paid for them and all its other construction liabilities in no time.

Godsend to the Army. Immediately a tremendous business in small hands developed. The American doughboys were always sending money somewhere and most of them wanted to borrow between paydays. An officer's indorsement was all the enlisted man needed to borrow a reasonably large portion of his pay in advance. A minimum cash charge was made for discount of these notes and time loans were made to officers at 3 per cent per annum. This business put the bank on its feet almost before it needed feet.

The big field of local banking business, with the Germans came slowly, but it rose and rose until it reached important volume. The enormous speculation in industrial stocks and municipal bonds which followed rapid depreciation of the mark in 1920 and 1921 brought the Rhineland bank of the young Americans a greater source of large income in commissions for executing sales and purchases. This grew to such size that the bank was not able to handle all of its brokerage business and had to divide it with correspondent banks.

Success of this phenomenal sort naturally attracted to the American bankers the keen interest of great German banking houses. Others were made to buy or absorb the new institution, but they were not interested.

When the Rhineland bank was opened the Germans of Coblenz never thought of using checks except in large transactions. If a business man received in payment of an account a check for 1,000 marks he tucked it carefully in his pocket and went around in his bank, which resembled an old-fashioned law office rather than a financial institution. The banker sent the check to the bank on which it was drawn, or to his own, and paid out the cash, which was carried off by its owner or deposited to his account.

The American bank paid its bills with checks, of course, and thus advertised its modern methods locally. Germans began to be depositors in satisfactory numbers and they learned to pay their bills in checks. Their example spread.

Then came one of the strangest things in financial history. As the gold value of the German paper mark shrank German industry was increasing as never before. This meant an increasing need for currency and an increase at the same time in the amount of currency needed. The mark was needed one month to pay what was a bill for one mark the previous month.

Checks Better Than Money. Scarcity of currency grew. A climax came last July when was reached with growing threat of disaster there after week after week. The printers who printed the Reichsbank national paper currency of Germany went on strike in July following the murder of Dr. Walter Rathenau, minister of finance. No currency was printed for weeks, and issue never had caught up with increasing demand for currency.

Checks of the Rhineland bank of the young Americans became cherished things. They were preferred to currency. Those lucky enough to get them held on to them as if they were gold coins. The bank could not get its checks back.

Thus millions of marks were loaned to the bank by these holders of its checks because the cash held to protect them became available for loans by the bank with great profit from such use. The necessary security to meet these checks were, of course, kept in the depository banks of the Rhineland bank. Those securities bore interest and the money representing the withheld checks was bearing interest in loans, so the bank profited both ways.

Mr. Neudecker married Miss Sibyl Koenigs, whose father was famous as American director of the French line of steamships during his administration throughout the war years.

Good Work of Spanish Jews. In the Twelfth and Thirteenth centuries Spanish Jews translated Moorish scientific works from Arabic into Castilian, and by a roundabout but important road contributed to the revival of classical learning. The great service which the wise men of Muslim Spain did for European culture consisted in their handing on the learning of the ancient Greeks, though it was sometimes disguised or embellished in the form in which they preserved it. They revived philosophy in the study of Plato, Aristotle and Empedocles; while in other branches of learning also they helped to prepare the way for what some called "learned ignorance," but others the renaissance. Men came from France, from England and from Germany, to study in the Moorish schools of Spain, diffusing through Europe the knowledge which they had gained; and Rabbi Ben Ezra, (1070-1160) traveled in Italy, France and England, spreading the learning of the Spanish Jews. A. J. E. Brand, in "A Picture of Modern Spain."

Vengeful Disposition. "This movie ought to be good." "Why so?" asked the satirical citizen.

"Harold Heartbreak, the peerless screen lover, leaps from a precipice 2,000 feet high."

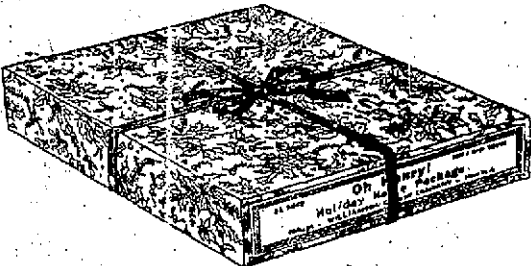

"Does he break his neck?" "Of course not. It's just a camera trick."

"Then that particular movie is not worth a quarter to me." Birmingham Age-Herald.

Pays Fine for Flying Too Low. Charged with driving his airplane too low over the business section of Birmingham, Ala., Bar Harrell, airplane pilot, paid a fine of $5. Birmingham regulates air traffic by ordinance.

STEEL PRODUCTION HOLDS TO RATE IN OCTOBER, NOVEMBER

Volume of business is fair with no appearance of slackness in the market. Prices hold up. Special to The Weekly Courier.
NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—The American Metal Market and Daily Iron Steel Report will review the steel production and shipments of steel have averaged approximately the same rate this for this month as in October and November. Several interests, particularly Steel Corporation subsidiaries, have been running better, while a few independents have curtailed production slightly.

There will be many closings of finishing departments over the holidays and some steel producing units will close. The pig iron production will continue. The average steel interest is anxious to accumulate a fair pig iron stock for emergencies, and there was a little accumulation of iron at points in November.

There is a fair volume of steel business in the market. Several interests, including several jobs of plates, are unusually large, number of freight cars is under negotiation. Less than half of the freight cars ordered thus far this year, about 150,000, have been built, and the car shops will probably make the new year with more than six months of freight cars ahead. The automobile industry is also lined up for heavy production while agricultural implements factories have been increasing their schedules and evidently have fair business ahead.

Altogether, while the steel market presents an appearance of quietness there is assurance of there being fairly large consumption of steel during the first half of the new year. Whether the mills will find it easy or difficult to supply the requirements depends chiefly upon the physical conditions of their operation. A coal strike April 1st is certainly a possibility and not a few observers consider it a probability. There is also the variation of there being no union strike but a non-union one.

Steel prices hold up quite well and do not seem to be under particular pressure. Leading manufacturers are committed to a price of 2.00c on bars, shapes and plates for first quarter, although there will be no hesitancy in meeting price competition if such should develop.

AMERICANS BUSY CREATING MODES

Scores of Girls Are Being Trained in Art Schools to Devise Costumes.

AT WORK ON SPRING MODELS

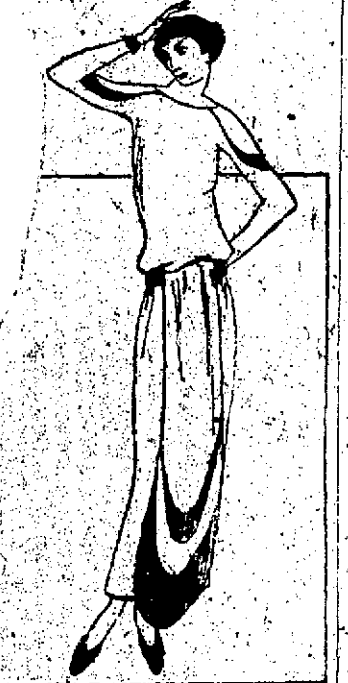

Designers of This Country, Having Supplied Many Fashions for Winter, Planning Styles From Home-Grown Materials.

We hear a good deal about American clothes, but mostly there is no real evidence that they are strictly of American origin, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times. The idea, the imagination can always come from unknown sources. They must necessarily do this. And so, there is ever the possibility that a so-called American design will be accused of not being American at all.

After all, to the average woman, it matters not the slightest bit whether the design is American or Hindu if she happens to like it. It is the fashion designer who is the one who is to draw the proper sort of flattering remarks from those who see her wear it. However, there is arising a multitude of American designed and made clothes, all of which are quite startlingly beautiful. And there is, of course, an underlying, psychological demand for dresses which have included in their workmanship not only the attitudes of American workmen but the American art that goes to make up the design. The women in this country are developing, almost unknown to themselves, a style of their own, suited to the needs of their type and that type only. It is really the demand which is creating the art, and for that very reason the art becomes at once a vital thing and one which is tremendously interesting.

American women, wherever it is possible to count, their tastes have no use for extreme of style—for audacious dippings into the past for period costumes, etc. They keep that particular energy for their fancy dress parties. But on the street they wish to dress much the same from year to year, with just enough change to make their costume interesting and not enough reform to make a total readjustment of their wardrobe necessary. Now this is a force which seems to be gaining in strength every day and every year. American women are not stampeding for the cause, neither are they banding together to demand what they want. The fact is that the movement for American dress is so subtle a thing that it grows among women without their realizing what is happening to them. A woman goes to the shops these days to a totally different frame of mind from the one she carried with her five or ten years ago. There are certain attributes of dress which she actually demands.

Many Girls Students. Out of the art schools there are coming scores of little girls trained in costume design. They are being trained to lead the new generation, and they are so much more prevalent than they ever were before. Now, when the new generation grows up to a place of power, it is going to think much more naturally about American design than we are thinking now. It is going to take the expression of its own country for granted as a matter of course. It is going to accept the natural evolution of so natural a fashion that we who have talked and talked and doubted, will be put to shame. We will see that we were getting excited over a perfectly natural occurrence and that the existence and the development of American costume design was a natural evolution which could not be circumvented even had we wished to do so.

One of the traditional fashion expressions in Paris has always been that the designers of dresses and suits have looked over the fabrics, "traced" their possibilities and decided how the expression of clothes could best be carried out through the medium of these fabrics. Now that is beginning to be done in America. Why should we rush across the water with our materials and beg the French designers to make up models according to the necessities of our homegrown fabrics? It is a matter of about convention. And, quite gradually and securely, we are so developing that we are giving to our own designers, away in advance of the season, the materials which will inspire them to create new models. It is only by that process that styles are created. And we are becoming mature enough to develop our own fashions instead of sitting by and waiting for Paris to do it for us.

Work Is Distinctive.

Already American designers are busy on their models for the spring, and long ago they delved into the mysteries of the winter fabrics so that we could have for our selection the very

The Serge Frock in American Design, Made in Yellow, With Brown Folded Bands for Decoration.

most interesting winter designs made from our own homegrown materials.

It is all a fine tribute to American fashions. It is all a supreme promise for the American fashions to come. For they will grow better and better as time goes on. They will become distinctly more distinctive. They will evolve in course of time in exactly the way that the women of America wish them to evolve. They will become the thing which is, in its last analysis, the very expression of the soul of the American woman.

When the American woman has achieved her last realization of the power for fashion that she possesses, then she can truly be called the best dressed woman in the world. But as long as she consents to accept the ready-made fashions of other countries she cannot hope to take much pride in herself and her own gown achievements.

Hand-Made Tucks.

There is no reason why the dress of serge or kasha cloth should be in the least banal. There are so many ways to make it otherwise. A kasha-cloth dress has about it a great deal of originality. As a matter of fact, the material of this dress is a light cream and has much of the yellow tinge about it. Then it is trimmed with folded satin bands of a quite dark brown and with a yoke of lightish yellow linen, which does a great deal to set off the attractiveness of the design. There is a circular skirt, one of those which have made a great appeal to the smarter set of American women, and then there are bands run around the bottom of that skirt, these being repeated in various places on the bodice. On the shoulders and at a sort of buckle for the belt there are placed medallions of embroidery, which carry out the tones of yellow and tan, with brighter and contrasting shades added.

A gown of crepe in one of those heavier and newly woven silks is made in a tone of brown in one of the lighter shades which has been generally accepted through this last season and which bids fair to go on into another season with all of the fashions of style. It is trimmed effectively with shaped bands of tucking made from the same material. Now, the tucks are put in by hand and placed very closely together so that they succeed in giving the very best sort of decorative trimming effect, and at the same time they manage to create with the soft folds of the crepe itself a gown that is simply made and delicately constructed.

One attractive gown is made of a finely striped, taffeta colored blue and mauve. It has a long and fitted bodice that flares off to a point directly in the front. Then there are velvet roses of corset that are formed in a very decorative sort of manner and are arranged in a line over the dropped shoulders and again on the light-rose underskirt which succeeds in making a panel in the front. At the foot of the bodice there is a plique or an edging of the same color velvet so that it acts as a sort of accent, and this, coupled with the rows of roses, makes the trimming note that is responsible for the whole style of the gown.

Gardens of Southern Spain Have a Charm That Is Seen Nowhere Else in Europe.

The gardens of Spain, with a few notable exceptions, were not laid out on the grand scale of those of the Italian villas near Rome, nor of the more magnificent of the French chateaux, but they have a romantic flavor of their own and a charm that is quite unlike that of any other European gardens—a charm that, in no small measure, can be directly traced to the influence of the Moorish occupation.

This Moorish influence is particularly apparent in the gardens of southern Spain (and they after all, are the most characteristic), where the vegetation is semi-tropic in character, and where palms and myrtles and thickets of citron and orange-trees give a truly African quality to the landscape. Perhaps as characteristic as any of these southern gardens are the Jardines del Alhambra in Seville. Of the original Alhambra, a huge fortress that formed the main military bulwark of the city, little or nothing

BUNGALOW MAKES BEAUTIFUL HOME

Colonial and California Architecture Attractively Combined.

IS COZY, NEAT AND COMPACT

Meets All the Requirements of the Average Family—Artistic Entrance and Clapboard Walls Give Colonial Effect.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF CHARGE on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he will be able to give the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 127 Prairie Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and enclose five-cent stamp for reply.

There is something always charming and inviting about a bungalow that makes it appeal to every home owner. Originating in California only a comparatively short number of years ago, they have spread rapidly to every part of the country, and today bungalows are probably the most popular style of American home architecture, due to their economic cost and attractive appearance.

A house is a structure to live in, but the house in the accompanying illustration is more than a house—it is a home. Your home is a structure that is made of your life by its association with your family, their joys and sorrows, their hopes, aspirations and fears. It is a visible expression of yourself, your tastes and character, and you cannot be too discriminating in determining its appearance.

Here is a charming bungalow that meets all the requirements your home should. With all its attractive features it is a place anyone would be proud to call home. Combining the best traditions of both the colonial and western bungalow designs it creates an aristocratic impression and will stand out distinctively in any city in the country.

Words cannot adequately describe the splendid features of this residence. The beauty and charm of the exterior is its outstanding characteristic and suggest individuality which is always desired in American bungalows, and the artistic entrance and clapboard walls give the colonial effect.

The house is especially designed to be built on the average sized lot, as it is 41 feet by 85 feet 6 inches, the longer distance being across the front. The terrace extends about five feet beyond the regular dimensions of the building.

As the illustration shows, it is possible to make the lawn and yard much more attractive and beautiful by artistically decorating it with flowers and plants, and the housewife who enjoys this hobby will have an excellent opportunity to employ her ingenuity and talent.

As one will observe from the floor plan, the interior arrangement is very pleasing and convenient. There are five rooms besides a bath and vestibule, and all of them have been laid out so as to permit abundant space and light.

From the front entrance one enters the living room, which is a very comfortable size, 14 by 15 feet. At the right of this room is a large fireplace where it is possible to have a genuine blaze. Two windows are at the front of the room, facing out upon the terrace. Directly ahead of the living room is the dining room, also of ample size, 14 by 15 feet. It is excellently lighted, containing four windows with three sides exposed. A built-in buffet also has been provided for in the plan.

There are two exits from the dining room, the first one leading into the hall directly at the left. From this hall one can enter both bedrooms, the bath, the basement steps and the kitchen, as the floor plan indicates. Both bedrooms and the bath occupy the entire left side of the house. These sleeping rooms are well ventilated, each containing four windows, and are 13 feet 6 inches in size. Both rooms contain plenty of drawers and space-saving closets, there being two in the back bedroom and one in the front.

The bathroom is entered from the hall and follows the customary build-low arrangement, being located between the two bedrooms. There are three entrances to the kitchen, one from the dining room, one from the hall and one from the vestibule. It is of good size, 8 by 14 feet, providing plenty of room to conveniently do the kitchen work, and the plans provide for a sink, range and kitchen cabinet. The vestibule, entered from the rear, is an excellent place for the refrigerator, and will serve as the back porch.

Effective Deliveries.
Delivering gasoline, oil and air from door to door is the latest activity of a filling station in Denver, Colo., says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The vehicle used for the work is equipped with a 750-gallon gasoline tank, a 60-gallon tank for lubricating oil, a heavy-duty air compressor with a tank having a capacity of 160 pounds, all of which are mounted on the chassis of a two-ton motor truck. A complete line of accessories for emergency needs is also carried, it being the owner's intention to travel a regular route over the adjacent highways, dispensing general "first aid" during the summer months, while in the winter, a house-to-house service will be maintained.

Now the "Kathethermometer."
Did you ever hear of the "kathethermometer?" It's a new instrument, so new that its name and description have not reached the latest dictionaries. It is used to determine the rate of cooling of a body. The inventor, Dr. Leonard Hill of England, decided after many experiments that the rate of cooling of the human body was the controlling factor in determining comfort and discomfort, and then set himself to the task of inventing an instrument that would measure the rate of cooling.—New York Evening Post.

"Egypt of America."
Yucatan is "the Egypt of America." As early as the beginning of the Christian era the people there built stone structures of excellent masonry, true angles and smooth, vertical faces. They had astronomical observations, an accurate calendar, and a better system of numerals than the Romans.

"We are in a strange relation to each other, Miss Santoline—stranger than you know," he said unevenly. She waited for him to go on. "When the time comes that you comprehend what our actual relation is, I want you to know that I understand that whatever you have done was done because you believed it might bring about the greater good. I-I have seen in you—in your father—only kindness, high honor, sympathy. If I did not know—"

She started, looking at him, what he said had absolutely no meaning for her. "What is it that you know?" she demanded.

He did not reply; his hand went out to hers, seized it, pushed it, and he started away. As he went up the stairs—still in his absorption, carrying his head overcast—she stood staring after him in perplexity.

CHAPTER XVI

The Fight in the Study.
Eaton climbed the stairs who had been waiting in his room for him; he looked the door and carefully drew down all the window shades. Then he put his overcoat, folded as he had been carrying it under his arm, on the writing table in the center of the room, and from its folds and pockets took a "breast-drill" such as iron workers use in drilling steel, an automatic pistol with three clips of cartridges, an electric flashlight and a little bottle of cyanide. He loaded the pistol and put it in his pocket; then he carefully inspected the other things.

He raised a shade and window, and sat in the dark. The night was cloudy and very dark. He gazed at the south wing of the house; the windows of the more accustomed and the curtains drawn; but tonight there was no light in the room. Then in the dark he moved to the table where he had left his overcoat, and distributed in his pockets and within his clothing the articles he had brought; and now he felt again in the center of the room, and brought out a short, strong bar of steel curved and flattened at one end—"Jimmy" for forcing the windows.

Eaton slipped off his shoes and went to his room door; he opened the door and found the hall dark and quiet. He stepped into the hall, and with a full behind him, and with great caution he descended the stairs. He went to the window in the drawing room which was set in a recess and so placed that it was not visible from other windows in the house. He opened this window and let himself down upon the lawn. He gained the south corner of the wing, unobserved at least without sign that he had been seen, and went on around it.

He stopped at the first high French window on the south. As he tried to slip Jimmy under the bottom of the sash, the window, to his amazement, opened silently upon its hinges; it had not been locked. The heavy curtains within hung just in front of him; he put out his hand and parted them. Then he started back in astonishment, and crouched close to the ground, inside the room was a man moving about, flashing an electric torch before him, and then exploring an instant in darkness and flashing his torch again.

Eaton had not been at all prepared for this; now he knew suddenly that he ought to have been prepared for it. If the man within the room was not the one who had attacked him with the motor, he was closely allied with the man and what he was after now was the same thing Eaton was after. He drew his pistol, and looting the safety, he made it ready to fire; with his left hand, he clung to the short, heavy Jimmy. He stepped into the great room through the curtains, and reaching cautiously in his stocking feet, he advanced upon the man, moving forward in each period of darkness between the flashes of the electric torch.

Now, at the further side of the room, another electric torch flashed out. There were at least two men in the room, working together—or rather, one was working, the other supervising; for Eaton heard now a steady, almost inaudible, grinding noise as the second man worked. Eaton halted again and waited; if there were two, there might be others.

His pulses were beating faster and faster, and he felt the blood rushing to his head and his hands growing cold with his excitement; but he was conscious of no fear. He crouched and crept forward noiselessly nearer to other light appeared in the room, and there was no sound elsewhere from the darkness; but the man who supervised had moved closer to the door. The grinding noise had stopped; it was followed by a sharp click; the men, side by side, were bending over something; and the light in the room who had been working, for a fraction of a second shot into the face of the other. He muttered some short, hoarse imprecation, but before Eaton heard the voice, he had stopped as if struck, and his breath had gone from him.

His instant's glimpse of that face, suddenly, stunned, stupefied him. He could not believe that man. The face was impossible. He must have been mad; his mind must have become unyieldable to let him even imagine it. Then came the sound of the voice—the voice of the man whose face he had seen! It was he! And, in place of the pale, weary, of the first instant, now a wild, savage, throes of passion seized Eaton; his pulses leaped so it seemed they must burst his veins, and he gulped and choked. He had not filled in with insane fancy the features of the man whose face he had seen; the voice witnessed too that the man in the dark by the wall was he whom Eaton—if he could have dreamed such a fact as now had been disclosed—would have died the world to catch and destroy; yet now with the destruction of that vision in his power, for he had but to aim and empty his automatic pistol at five paces—such destruction at this moment could not suffice; mere shooting that man would be petty, ineffectual. Eaton's fingers tightened on the handle of his pistol, but he held it now not as a weapon to fire but as a dull weight with which to strike. The grip of his left hand clamped onto the short steel bar, and with lips parted—breathing once, it seemed, for each heartbeat and yet choking, suffocating—he leaped forward.

At the same instant—so that he could not have been alarmed by Eaton's leap—the man who had been working moved his torch, and the light fell upon Eaton.

"Look out!" the man cried in alarm to his companion; with the torch he held a shoulder and not a head or back would strike the floor first. He succeeded in this, though in his effort he dropped the Jimmy. He clung with his right hand to the pistol, and as he struck the floor, the pistol shot off, the flash of flame spurted toward the ceiling. Instantly the grip below his knees was loosened; the man who had tackled him and hurled him back had recoiled in the darkness. Eaton got to his feet but crouched and crept about behind a table, aiming his pistol over it in the direction in which he supposed the other man must be. The sound of the shot had ceased to roar through the room; the gases from the powder only made the air heavier. The other two men in the room also waited, hostile and silent. The only light, in the great curtained room, came from the single electric torch lying on the floor. This lighted the legs of a chair, a corner of a desk and a circle of books in the cases on the wall. As Eaton's eyes became more accustomed to the darkness, he could see vague shapes of furniture. If a man moved, he might be made out; but if he stayed still, probably he would remain indistinguishable.

The other men seemed also to have recognized this; no one moved in the room, and there was complete silence. Eaton knelt on one knee behind his table; now he was wildly, excitedly excited; his blood leaped hotly to his hand pointing his pistol; he panted, almost audibly, for breath, but though his pulse throbbed through his head, his mind was clear and cool as he reckoned his situation and his chances. He had crossed the Pacific, the continent, he had schemed and risked everything with the mere hope of getting into this room to discover evidence with which to demand from the world righting of the wrong which had driven him as a fugitive for five years; and here he found the man who was the cause of it all, before him in the same room a few paces away in the dark!

For it was impossible that this was not that man; and Eaton knew now that this was he who must have been behind and arranging and directing the attacks upon him. Eaton had not only seen him and heard his voice, but he had felt his grasp; that sudden, instinctive crouch before a charge, and the savage lunge and tackle were the instant, natural acts of an old line—man on a championship team in the game of football as it was played twenty years before. The lift of the opponent off his feet and the heavy lunge hurling him back to fall on his head was what one man in the rougher, more cruel days of the college game—had been famous for. On the football field that throw sufficed to knock a belated opponent unconscious; here it was meant, beyond doubt, to do more.

Upon so much, at least, Eaton's mind at once was clear; here was his enemy whom he must destroy if he were not first destroyed. He thought, regarding other relations altered or overturned in his hearing by the discovery of this man the shot, if not the sound of the struggle which preceded it, must have raised an alarm. Basil Santoline, as Eaton knew, slept above; a nurse must be waiting on duty somewhere near. Eaton had seen the row of buttons which the blind man had within arms' length, with which he must be able to summon every servant in the house. So it could not last much longer now—this deadlock in the dark. And one of the two at least, seemed to have recognized that.

Eaton had moved, warily and carefully, but he had moved; a revolver flashed before him, instantly and without consciousness that his finger pulled the trigger. Eaton's pistol flashed back, for from on him, the flame flashed again, and another spurt of fire spurt at one side.

Eaton fired back at this—he was prostrate on the floor now, and whether he had been hit or not he did not yet know, or whether the blood flowing down his face was only from a splinter sprung from the table behind which he hid. He fired again, holding his pistol far out to one side to confuse the aim of the other; he thought that they too were doing the same and allowed for it in his aim. He pulled his trigger a third time; he had not counted his shots, but he knew he had had seven cartridges in the magazine and one in the barrel—and the pistol clicked without discharging. He rolled over further away from the spot where he had last fired and pulled an extra clip of cartridges from his pocket.

The blood was flowing hot over his face. He made no effort to staunch it or even to feel with his fingers to find exactly where or how badly he had been hit. He jerked the empty cartridge clip from his pistol butt and snatched in the other. He swept his sleeve over his face to clear the blood from his brows and eyes and stared through the dark with pistol at arm's length, loaded and ready. Blood spurted over his face again; another sweep of his sleeve cleared it; and he moved his pistol-point back and forth in the dark.

Surely now the sound of firing in that room must have reached the man in the room above; surely he must be summing his servants.

Eaton listened; there was still no sound from the rest of the house, but overhead now, he heard an almost imperceptible pattering—the sound of a barefooted man crossing the floor; and he knew that the blind man in the bedroom above was getting up.

CHAPTER XVII

Under Cover of Darkness.

Basil Santoline was oversensitive to sound, as are most of the blind; in the world of darkness in which he lived, sounds were by far the most significant—and almost the only—
